PART I:
STAFFING, THE ORGANISATION AND RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION

1. CHAPTER 1: STAFFING, SYSTEMS AND STRATEGY
   Bernard O’Meara
   1.1. Chapter learning objectives
   1.2. Introduction
   1.3. Learning activities
   1.4. Staffing
   1.5. Recruitment
      1.5.1. Determining why the vacancy has occurred 1.5.2. Is the job necessary and has approval been given to fill the vacancy?
      1.5.3. Has a budget been allocated to fund the recruitment and selection of new staff?
      1.5.4. Is there a clear link between the vacancy and the organisation’s strategic direction and objectives?
      1.5.5. Should a person already with the organisation be appointed or should new staff be appointed from outside the organisation?
      1.5.6. Has the job been properly analysed?
      1.5.7. Are there any legal or union-based considerations to be addressed?
      1.5.8. Are there appropriate application forms?
   1.6. Selection
   1.7. Management philosophy
   1.8. The role and scope of management
   1.9. Personnel management (PM)
   1.10. Human resource management (HRM)
   1.11. Strategic human resource management (SHRM)
   1.12. People, performance, profit/outcome and corporate strategy link
   1.13. Resource maximisation strategies
   1.15. Traditional approaches to recruitment and selection
   1.16. Systems theory
   1.17. What is a system?
1.18. How systems work
1.19. The application of systems theory to recruitment and selection
   1.19.1. Crowd sourcing
   1.19.2. Experiential learning opportunities
   1.19.3. Job sharing
   1.19.4. Leasing
   1.19.5. Outsourcing
   1.19.6. Promotion
   1.19.7. Redistribution of tasks and responsibilities
   1.19.8. Staff ambassadors
1.20. The strategic approach
   1.20.1. What is strategic management?
   1.20.2. Aligning people and the organisation
1.21. Sustainable staffing
1.22. Organisational diagnostics
1.23. The role of strategic staffing using a systems approach
1.24. Summary
1.25. Review questions
1.26. Learning activities

2. CHAPTER 2: THE ORGANISATION
   Bernard O’Meara
2.1. Chapter learning objectives
2.2. Introduction
2.3. The organisation
2.4. Organisation change and growth
2.5. Strategic options
2.6. Porter’s generic strategies
   2.6.1. Focus strategies
   2.6.2. Cost leadership or cost minimisation strategies
   2.6.3. Differentiation strategies
   2.6.4. Implication of the choice of strategy
2.7. Culture
2.8. Structure
2.9. The environment
2.10. The organisation & environment interface and links
2.11. Maintaining or enhancing the reputation and image of the organisation
2.12. Social responsibility and ethics
2.13. Preferred employers
2.14. Demographics
2.15. VRIO: skill and knowledge analyses and gaps
   2.15.1. Value
   2.15.2. Rarity
   2.15.3. Imitability
   2.15.4. Organisation
2.16. Succession
3. CHAPTER 3: RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION PREPARATION

Stanley Petzall

3.1. Chapter learning objectives
3.2. Job analysis
3.3. Job descriptions
3.4. Critique of job descriptions
3.5. Job analysis techniques
   3.5.1. Observation
   3.5.2. Interviews
   3.5.3. Questionnaires
   3.5.4. Diaries/logs
3.6. Job re-design opportunities
   3.6.1. Job simplification
   3.6.2. Job enlargement
   3.6.3. Job rotation
   3.6.4. Job enrichment
3.7. Competency profiling
3.8. Internal v external appointments
   3.8.1. Internal recruitment
   3.8.2. External recruitment
3.9. Non-traditional sources
3.10. Advertising
   3.10.1. National or metropolitan daily newspapers
   3.10.2. Local suburban newspapers
   3.10.3. Specialist journals
   3.10.4. Radio and television
   3.10.5. AIDA
3.11. The Internet
3.12. Retention strategies
3.13. Human capital theory
3.14. Signalling theory
3.15. Person-organisation fit
3.16. Decision making
3.17. The use and role of consultants
3.18. Summary
3.19. Review questions

4. CHAPTER 4: COMMUNICATION, BODY LANGUAGE, QUESTIONS AND INTERVIEWS

Stanley Petzall

4.1. Chapter learning objectives
4.2. Communicating with potential applicants
   4.2.1. Cultural considerations
   4.2.2. Space
   4.2.3. Time
4.3. International recruitment and selection
   4.3.1. Ethnocentricity, polycentricity and geocentricity
4.4. Interviews
   4.4.1. The role and purpose of interviews
   4.4.2. Reliability and validity
   4.4.3. Types of interviews
   4.4.4. Group interviews
   4.4.5. Peer interviews
   4.4.6. Referral interviews
   4.4.7. Behavioural interviews
   4.4.8. Interview environment
   4.4.9. Preparation for interviews
   4.4.10. The interview process
   4.4.11. On-line hurdles and computer interviewing
   4.4.12. Body language and first impressions
   4.4.13. Questions and questioning techniques
   4.4.14. Active listening
   4.4.15. Legal considerations
   4.4.16. Criticisms of the interview process
   4.4.17. Competent interviewers
   4.4.18. Selection and training interviews
   4.4.19. Recruitment and selection of senior executives
   4.4.20. Insider/outside theory
4.5. E-recruitment and selection
   4.5.1. Video resumes
   4.5.2. Skype and distance interviewing
4.6. Laws impacting upon staffing
4.7. Evaluation
4.8. Summary
4.9. Review questions

5. CHAPTER 5: AIDS FOR RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION
   Bernard O’Meara
5.1. Chapter learning objectives
5.2. Recruitment and selection aids
5.3. The role and purpose of testing
   5.3.1. Psychometrics
   5.3.2. Types of tests
   5.3.3. Cognitive/ability tests
   5.3.4. Graphology
   5.3.5. Situational judgment tests
5.4. Reliability and validity
5.4.1. Reliability
   5.4.2. Test-retest reliability
   5.4.3. Inter-rater reliability
   5.4.4. Parallel-test reliability
   5.4.5. Internal consistency
5.5. Validity
   5.5.1. Criterion-related validity
   5.5.2. Concurrent validity
   5.5.3. Predictive validity
   5.5.4. Other forms of validity
5.6. Situational testing
   5.6.1. Assessment centres
   5.6.2. Game theory, simulations and innovative selection tools
5.7. Social networking
5.8. Referrals from crowdsourcing and innovation management
5.9. Offers
5.10. Psychological contracts
   5.10.1. Listing expectations
5.11. Direct and indirect discrimination and their impact
   5.11.1. Fairness and equity
5.12. Traditional and non-traditional reference checks (confirmation material)
5.13. Probationary periods
   5.13.1. The exchange/negotiation perspective
   5.13.2. Interview preparation
5.14. Summary
5.15. Review questions
5.16. Learning activities

PART II:
APPLICANTS AND CANDIDATES

6. CHAPTER 6: APPLICANTS AND RESUMES
   Bernard O’Meara
   6.1. Chapter learning objectives
   6.2. Introduction
   6.3. Candidates and applicants
      6.3.1. Does a candidate always know that he or she is a candidate?
   6.4. Life experiences
      6.4.1. Undergraduate placements, consulting and internships
      6.4.2. Volunteering
      6.4.3. Cold calling
      6.4.4. Employability
   6.5. Constructing the resume
      6.5.1. The cover letter
   6.6. Preparing the résumé
      6.6.1. Curriculum Vitae (CV) or résumé
6.6.2. Which type of résumé to use
6.6.3. Traditional résumé approaches
6.6.4. Graduates and those with limited work experience
6.6.5. The targeted résumé
6.6.6. The hybrid résumé
6.6.7. The inclusion of photographs
6.6.8. Creative résumés
6.6.9. False résumés
6.6.10. Necessitated résumés
6.6.11. Résumé hooks
6.7. Research on organisation & industry
6.8. Cultural differences
6.9. Summary
6.10. Review questions
6.11. Learning activities

7. CHAPTER 7: INTERVIEW PREPARATION
Bernard O’Meara
7.1. Chapter learning objectives
7.2. Introduction
7.3. Preparing for the interview
7.4. General interview preparation
7.5. The impact of pre-employment perceptions
7.6. Change of system status
7.7. Recruitment interviews
7.8. Selection interviews
7.9. Cognitive interviewing
7.10. Commonly asked interview questions
7.11. Job specific questions
7.12. Preparing for specific interview types
7.13. Questions to ask the interviewer
7.14. Summary
7.15. Review questions
7.16. Learning activities

8. CHAPTER 8: FIRST IMPRESSIONS
Bernard O’Meara
8.1. Chapter learning objectives
8.2. Introduction
8.3. The first meeting
8.4. Expectancy
8.5. Perspective
8.6. Establishing a relationship
8.7. Trust
8.8. Power
8.9. Indicative behaviour
8.10. The 80/20 guide
8.11. Eye contact
8.12. Nervousness and observable behaviour
8.13. Accents and colour
8.15. Applicant’s perspective
8.16. Interviewer’s perspective
8.17. Summary
8.18. Review questions
8.19. Learning activities

PART III:
JOINING TOGETHER: WHEN NEW EMPLOYEES COMMENCE AT A NEW ORGANISATION

9. CHAPTER 9: A NEW START
Bernard O’Meara
9.1. Chapter learning objectives
9.2. Introduction
9.3. Induction, Orientation and Onboarding
9.4. Orientation
9.5. The second part of the induction programme — socialisation of new staff
9.6. Engagement
  9.6.1. Job characteristics.
  9.6.2. Rewards and recognition
  9.6.3. Procedural justice
  9.6.4. Distributive justice
  9.6.5. Perceived organisational and supervisor support
9.7. Disengagement
9.8. Talent management systems
9.9. Individual career maps and succession
9.10. Training & Development
  9.10.1. Multiple intelligences
  9.10.2. Learning Styles
9.11. Retention and turnover
9.12. Graduate programmes
9.13. Summary
9.15. Learning activities

10. CHAPTER 10: RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION COSTS
Bernard O’Meara
10.1. Chapter learning objectives
10.2. Introduction
10.3. Talent acquisition and internal consulting
10.4. Return on investment (ROI)
10.5. Expatriate Return on Investment (EROI)
10.6. Full labour costs
10.7. The costs of recruitment and selection
10.8. The cost of morale
10.9. The cost of employing staff with different educational backgrounds
10.10. Staff separations
10.11. The cost of getting it wrong
10.12. The benefits of a talent development programme
10.13. Human resource accounting (HRA)
10.14. Creating a business case for talent acquisition
10.15. Summary
10.16. Review questions
10.17. Learning activities

11. CHAPTER 11: CONTINUAL IMPROVEMENT: THE KAIZEN REQUIREMENT

Bernard O’Meara

11.1. Chapter learning objectives
11.2. Introduction
11.3. List of expectations revisited
11.4. Feedback loops
11.5. Inputs
11.6. Processes
11.7. Those using the processes
11.8. Other external and internal deterrents
11.8.1. External deterrents
11.8.2. Internal deterrents
11.9. The transformation process
11.10. Evaluating performance and ‘fit’
11.11. Human resource information systems and talent management systems
11.12. Continual improvement (Kaizen)
11.12.1. The characteristics of Kaizen
11.12.2. Types of Kaizen
11.12.3. Management development
11.12.4. Kaizen methodology
11.13. Fixing it!
11.14. Summary
11.15. Review questions
11.16. Learning activities

12. CHAPTER 12: EVALUATION

Bernard O’Meara

12.1. Chapter learning objectives
12.2. Introduction
12.3. Evaluation
12.3.1. Why evaluate?
12.3.2. What is it hoped that the evaluation processes will achieve?
12.3.3. What will be evaluated?
12.3.4. Analytic evaluation
12.3.5. Intuitive evaluation
12.4. Evaluating recruitment and selection
   12.4.1. Costing
12.5. Summary
12.6. Review questions

REFERENCES

APPENDICES

A. RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION SUMMARY
B. EFFECTIVE RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION
C. STRATEGIES TO ACQUIRE AND RETAIN STAFF
D. INTERVIEW GUIDE TEMPLATE
E. QUESTION TYPES AND SEQUENCES
F. REFERENCE CHECK TEMPLATE
G. OUTLINE OF A TARGETED RESUME
H. WHERE WE DEVELOP AND DISPLAY HUMAN CAPITAL
I. RESUME WRITING WORKSHEET
J. RESUME TYPES AND EXAMPLES
K. PHONE INTERVIEW SCREENING TEMPLATE

GLOSSARY

INDEX