Overview

SMEs account for a high percentage of the economy across the Asia-Pacific region and have a significant impact on this economy. Research shows that the average life-span of an SME is only a few years, which shows that the difficulties and challenges faced by their operators are underestimated. SMEs need to concentrate on innovation in order to respond to rapid market changes and instability, to open up new business opportunities, and to encourage enterprises to be sustainable. This special issue seeks to promote real cases of innovation within the SME context, providing practical teaching materials offering first-hand information and discussion of convergence and development for SMEs' operation.

The case studies may focus on any innovation-related topics in SMEs. Submissions may deal with a wide variety of innovations and how the challenges and opportunities these innovations present regarding the successful operation of SMEs. The submissions should expose students to theories and practices related to innovation and SMEs in general and the application of business strategies.

We welcome quality teaching case studies in any field related to innovation and SME in the Asia-Pacific region, particularly those related to the following topics but not limited to:

1. SMEs strategies and innovation
2. Knowledge networking among SMEs
3. Business model and innovation of SMEs
4. Networking, partnerships and innovation for SMEs
5. Innovation and development life-cycle of SMEs
6. Adapting and realigning intangible resources of SMEs
7. Innovation and marketing of SMEs
