JOURNAL OF PUBLIC MENTAL HEALTH

To improve the mental health of a population takes a creative blend of scientific disciplines and an understanding of communities. By asking the right questions, this journal offers practical ideas which can be applied by the people in society who can make a difference. A 2020 special issue looked at 'Student wellbeing' and considers burnout in paid students, effects of accelerated two-year degrees and the impact of student drinking.

JOURNAL OF ENABLING TECHNOLOGIES

How can technology enhance and improve the lives of children, young people and adults? This journal focuses on the evidence-based application of technologies to enable better communication, independent living, learning for all, access to services and the benefits that come with access to culture, care and support.

TIZARD LEARNING DISABILITY REVIEW

The journal is named after Professor Jack Tizard (1919-1979) — a pioneering psychologist whose work on alternatives to institutional care for people with learning disabilities underpinned the development of 'ordinary life' models and community care as it is known today. The journal aims to continue his work by using positive practice models as a way to implement change.
